PILOT FIGHTS PLANE BLAZE

Vance Sits on Volcano For Three Hours; Speed Event Is Underway.

UNITED AIRPORT, BURBANK, Cal., Aug. 29.—After a dramatic three-hour fight with death high in the air over the mountains of eastern California, Charlie Vance of Oakland returned to the airport at 5:12 a. m. today, reducing the number of participants to four in the coast to coast speed flight.

The cockpit of Vance's huge red monoplane was flooded with gasoline. Vance explained the accident was caused by an eccentric siphonic action in the air vent which leads to the gasoline tank in the nose of the ship.

The airplane motor was spitting fire not more than two inches from the leaking gasoline and Vance's clothes were drenched when he landed.

"It was like sitting on a load of dynamite for three hours," Vance declared. "I kept on as long as I could, but the 400 gallons kept pouring into the cockpit and to have kept on would be foolish."

It's too bad," Vance had hopped off at 2:08 a. m.

He is definitely out of the race. The other four fliers who hoped off, Roscoe Turner, James Hazlip, James Wedell and Lee Gelbach, were unreported here, and were believed to be safely winging their way toward Cleveland and New York.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Only the meagrest of hope was held out today for the safety of Clyde A. Lee and John Bockhorn, young American fliers, unreported since their take-off Thursday morning on a trans-Atlantic flight from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to Oslo, Norway.

As the fifth day rolled by with word still lacking the possibility of their having landed on remote soil without means of communication dwindled. Each passing hour also lessened their chance of remaining afloat if they had been forced down on the ocean.

Abandons Hope of Obtaining Active Support

By RAYMOND I. BORST

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 29.—
Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee, has made his last bid for the active support of his one-time bosom friend, former Governor
Alfred E. Smith, it was revealed today by Roosevelt's advisors.

Rebuffed twice by Smith within the last 48 hours in an attempt to bring about a reconciliation, Governor Roosevelt has decided that if any more peace overtures are made during the campaign they will have to come from Smith.

NOW "SMITH MOVE"

Even though some Democratic leaders have expressed belief that one stump speech by Smith would be worth a million votes for the Democratic national ticket, Roosevelt will make no further efforts to heal the breach between himself and the man he characterized as the "happy warrior." So far as Governor Roosevelt is concerned, from now on it will be "Smith's move."

The reconciliation meeting between Roosevelt and Smith was to have been staged yesterday afternoon at a reception for the Governor at the summer home of his

Cubs And Yanks Will Be "Right"

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—When the Chicago Cubs and New York Yankees clash in the World series next month, the Cubs should be the favorite to win the series, according to Joe McCarthy, their manager.

A couple of weeks ago when the National league pennant race was in its hottest stage, it appeared that the Yankees would be too exhausted to be able to beat the American league champions.

LEAD IS HEALTHY

Today, however, the lead of the Cubs is almost as healthy as that of the Yankees, which means that the Braves will be able to coast down the stretch next month and point for the World series instead of concentrating on attacks from the rear in the National league scramble.

The Cubs looked like champions in losing out to the Giants for their tenth straight victory yesterday, 4 to 3, although they had to get a break in the ninth when Mel Ott misjudged a fly and a couple of minutes later made a wide throw to the plate. Pat Malone went the route for the winners and held the giants to seven hits.

Chicago is eight games ahead of the Pirates, who were idle yesterday and 8 1-2 games in front of the Dodgers, and lost both ends of a double header to the Cardinals, 4 to 1 and 6 to 4 and dropped to third place. The Cubs to fifth place from the Braves, who did not play.

DEAN ON RAMPAGE

Although held to seven hits in the opener, St. Louis bunched five blows off Clark in the sixth inning while Derringer blanked Brooklyn until the ninth. In the nightcap, Dizzy Dean, who wants to pitch every other day and has been doing just that lately, hung up his third victory in five days.

After losing a 2 to 1 decision to the Phillies, the Reds beat the Quakers 3 to 2 in the second game of their twin bill with Ep Rixey pitching.

With Ted Lyons outpitching George Pipgras and yielding only five hits, the Whitesox drubbed the Yankees 5 to 2, cracking New York's winning streak of five games. The Yankees won the nightcap in a walk, 11 to 3 as Babe Ruth, making a desperate effort to overhaul Jimmy Foxe in the home run derby, drove in four runs with his 39th home run and a single.

Lacking three pitchers for 21 hits, Detroit murdered the Senators, 15 to 7. John Store made four hits and drove in six runs.

Catcher Benny Tate, who had hit only three home runs in nine years in the majors, picked a timely spot for his fourth. It came in the eleventh inning of the second game of a double-header with Cleveland and gave the Red Sox a 4 to 3 decision. Willis Hudlin held the Sox to five hits in the easy triumph, 10 to 1.

NEAL IS VICTOR IN MARIETTA RACE

MARIETTA, Aug. 29.—Dick Neale, Kansas City outdoor motorboat enthusiast, today was in possession of the coveted Dawes trophy, which he won in the feature event of the annual mid-west regatta on the historic Muskingum river here.

While more than 25,000 persons lined the banks of the stream, Neale, driving as a professional, won the first two heats over the four-mile course. His best time was five minutes and 20 seconds.

HUNT AGAIN WINS

DAYTON, Aug. 28.—Byron Hunt, 17-year-old Columbus golfer, today had added the Central Ohio Public Links championship to his string of titles by turning in a score of 224 for the 54-hole medal play at Community country club here. He came home ahead of a field of 26 entrants.

Hunt also holds the district junior title.

law partner, Basil O'Connor at West Hampton Beach, L. I., but Smith bluntly refused to attend.

Instead of attending the reception for Governor Roosevelt, Smith left his own summer place nearby early in the morning and drove ninety miles up Long Island to far Rockaway where he spent the day with his son, Arthur. Smith returned to the vicinity of West Hampton last night after Roosevelt had started for Albany.

WAS "LAST STRAW"

This action on Smith's part, coming right on top of his refusal to attend the New Jersey Democratic rally last night, was the straw that broke the camel's back, so far as Governor Roosevelt is concerned. Henceforth, it was made plain by close friends of Roosevelt it will be entirely up to Smith if the breach that developed between the two more than a year ago is ever healed.

Democratic leaders were keenly disappointed when Smith refused to attend the New Jersey Democratic rally last night after Roosevelt had started for Albany.

A few days after he returned from the national convention Smith issued a statement in which he announced he would "support" the ticket, but he never said he would take the stump in the campaign.

To Vie for International Speed Honors

The old rivalry between Great Britain and the United States for world speedboat supremacy will flare anew on the morning of September 3rd, "Miss England III" and "Miss America X" will race for the Harnsworth Trophy on Lake St. Clair, Detroit, Mich. Wood, called the "Silver Fox" of American speedboat racing, is the present holder of the trophy and is confident of retaining it. Don, on the other hand, is equally confident that he is going to bring the bacon back to Merrie England. The British boat is regarded as the very latest thing in speedboat construction. She more than fulfilled the expectations of her designers, when she hung up a new world's speed record of nearly 120 miles an hour during her trials on Loch Lomond, Scotland. Besides, Don will be on the lookout for any strategical move, such as his opponent made last year, which resulted in spilling Miss England and leaving the race between Wood's two entries.

EXPENSE AT COURT HOUSES PROVE LOW SURVEY SHOWS

If the county court house were closed and all expenses connected therewith were abolished, the effect on the combined tax budgets of all local units of government would be a "saving" of only 5 per cent, said H. R. Moore, specialist in taxation for the Ohio State University, in commenting on the misunderstanding which he believes exists as to the costs of "general government."

were on the program to entertain the fair visitors. In the pageant, "Washington Lives," Miss Ann Madison Washington, a direct descendant of the first president of the country, will have a leading role.

Wild game exhibits, a casting tournament and a coon chase are expected to magnetize the interest of sportsmen and fishermen. An educational exhibition will show how Ohio's conservation needs are being carried out and how the 6,000,000 people in the state are being enlisted in the conservation fight.

Another feature of the fair will be a model airplane contest, both for flying and non-flying models and open only to the youth of the Buckeye state.

For the first time in the history of the fair, a fashion show will be held daily. Other feminine features included a needlework display and exhibits of pottery and silverware.

CHIMES PLAYED

As an expression of the esteem in which Monsignor Hannan was held in the city which has been the scene of his labors for so long, four hymns were played on the Foreman chimes preceding the time of the funeral.

Pall bearers, chosen from St. Joseph's congregation, were Leo McKenzie, Robert Smith, Thomas F. Jeffries, Thomas O. Gilliland, Frank A. Lynch and John M. Kinn. Honorary pall bearers, members of the Knights of Columbus, of Chillicothe, of which council, Monsignor Hannan was a member, were Sam McNally, Rooney, Gerber, Tom Colopy, P. J. Kennedy, Joseph Helmsmith and John J. Ryan.

The body was taken to the church at 2 p. m. Sunday where friends and acquaintances viewed it up to the time of the funeral mass.

GUARD OF HONOR

A guard of honor composed of young men members of the congregation remained with the body during this time. Rev. Fr. John J. Murphy, coadjutor of the Columbus diocese and Fr. Joseph Sullivan, assistant pastor of St. Joseph's church met the remains at the door of the church and preceded the coffin to the chancel rail. Following the recitation of the prescribed prayers the members of the congregation responded to the rosary.

The body of Monsignor Hannan was clad in his priestly vestments, the chasuble, or outer garment of purple, signifying his investiture as Monsignor. His berretta or cap of black and purple was placed on his coffin.

MAN ADMITS WIFE DEATH

Illinois School Teacher Confesses, Clears Up Two Weeks' Mystery.

MARSHALL, Ill., Aug. 29.—To thwart any attempt at mob violence extra guards today maintained close vigil over the Clarke Co. jail where Hubert C. Moore, high school teacher, confessed he killed his wife, Marjorie.

While a threatening crowd of farmers and townsmen milled about outside the jail, the conscience-stricken young teacher nervously paced his cell, reciting a strange story of jealousy and disgust over dirty dishes which led him to commit the crime.

"Every night," he said, "I would return to find the house dirty and the sink full of unwashed dishes. There was no quarrel. I simply decided that the only way out was to kill her."

In his confession, delivered to State's Attorney Victor Miller, the 30-year-old teacher said:

"Let them kill me in the electric chair. I want to die."

The confession, authorities announced, cleared up the mystery which arose two weeks ago when the bullet-riddled body of Moore's wife was found in the family automobile on a lonely roadside near here.

Although held to seven hits in the opener, St. Louis bunched five blows off Clark in the sixth inning while Derringer blanked Brooklyn until the ninth. In the nightcap, Dizzy Dean, who wants to pitch every other day and has been doing just that lately, hung up his third victory in five days.

After losing a 2 to 1 decision to the Phillies, the Reds beat the Quakers 3 to 2 in the second game of their twin bill with Ep Rixey pitching.

With Ted Lyons outpitching George Pipgras and yielding only five hits, the Whitesox drubbed the Yankees 5 to 2, creaking New York's winning streak of five games. The Yanks won the nightcap in a walk, 11 to 5 as Babe Ruth, making a desperate effort to overhaul Jimmy Fox in the home run derby, drove in four runs with his 39th homer and a single.

Lacing three pitchers for 21 hits, Detroit murdered the Senators, 15 to 7. John Stone made four hits and drove in six runs.

Catcher Benny Tate, who had hit only three home runs in nine years in the majors, picked a timely spot for his fourth. It came in the eleventh inning of the second game of a double-header with Cleveland and gave the Red Sox a 4 to 3 decision. Willis Hudlin held the Sox to five hits in the easy triumph, 10 to 1.

NEAL IS VICTOR IN MARIETTA RACE
MARIETTA, Aug. 29.—Dick Neale, Kansas City outboard motorboat enthusiast, today was in possession of the coveted Daves trophy which he won in the feature event of the annual mid-west regatta on the historic Muskingum river here.

While more than 25,000 persons lined the banks of the stream, Neale, driving as a professional, won the first two heats over the four-mile course. His best time was five minutes and 20 seconds.

Hunt also holds the district junior title.

law partner, Basil O'Connor at West Hampton Beach, L. I., but Smith bluntly refused to attend.

Instead of attending the reception for Governor Roosevelt, Smith left his own summer place nearby early in the morning and drove ninety miles up Long Island to Rockaway where he spent the day with his son, Arthur. Smith returned to the vicinity of West Hampton last night after Roosevelt had started for Albany.

WAS "LAST STRAW"
This action on Smith's part, coming right on top of his refusal to attend the Democratic rally staged for Governor Roosevelt at Sea Girt, N. J. on Saturday, was described as "the straw that broke the camel's back" so far as Governor Roosevelt is concerned. Henceforth, it was made plain by close friends of Roosevelt it will be entirely up to Smith if the breach that developed between the two more than a year ago is ever healed.

Democratic leaders were keenly disappointed when Smith refused to attend the New Jersey Democratic rally but they were chagrined when he refused to take the hand that literally was held out to him yesterday at West Hampton by Governor Roosevelt.

Governor Roosevelt is said to be convinced that Smith's actions of the last two days clearly indicate that he has no intention of actively supporting the national ticket.

When Smith left Chicago before Roosevelt arrived to formally accept the presidential nomination, friends of the former predicted he would spend most of his time this summer "fishing." By that they meant he would not take the stump for the Roosevelt-Garner ticket.

A few days after he returned from the national convention Smith issued a statement in which he announced he would "support" the ticket, but he never has said he would take the stump in the campaign.

To Vie for International Speed Honors

The old rivalry between Great Britain and the United States for world speedboat supremacy will flare anew on the morning of September 3rd, when Gar Wood's "Miss America X" and Kaye Don's "Miss England III" roar defiance at each other in the race for the Harmsworth Trophy on Lake St. Clair, Detroit, Mich. Wood, called the "Silver Fox" of American speedboat racing, is the present holder of the trophy and is confident of retaining it. Don, on the other hand, is equally confident that he is going to bring the bacon back to Merric England. The British boat is regarded as the very latest thing in speedboat construction. She more than fulfilled the expectations of her designers, when she hung up a new world's speed record of nearly 120 miles an hour during her trials on Loch Lomond, Scotland. Besides, Don will be on the lookout for any strategic move, such as his opponent made last year, which resulted in spilling Miss England and leaving the race between Wood's two entries.

EXPENSE AT COURT HOUSES PROVE LOW SURVEY SHOWS

If the county court house were closed and all expenses connected therewith were abolished, the effect on the combined tax budgets of all local units of government would be a "saving" of only 5 per cent, said H. R. Moore, specialist in taxation for the Ohio State University, in commenting on the misunderstanding which he believes exists as to the costs of "general government."

General government, according to Moore's definition, includes such services as are performed by executive and administrative officers and the courts, and among its costs are charges for elections, construction and maintenance of administrative buildings, and salaries and supplies for the various county, townships, and municipal offices.

Of the total expenditures of public funds in 11 counties studied by Moore and F. L. Morison of the department of rural economics at the university, general government services performed by the county township and municipalities required only 7.7 per cent as compared to 22.5 per cent for highways and streets, 34.7 per cent for education, 7.8 per cent for interest, and 12.8 per cent for decrease of debt, the remainder being for protection to persons and property, health, sanitation, charity and miscellaneous functions.

Relative cost of general government for the counties was somewhat larger than for the townships and municipalities, said Moore, but, he added, that is because the county performs certain services for the municipalities and townships which raise the cost of county government.

SCOUT IS KILLED

Michael Rotondo, 59, of Hudson, O., was killed at Cleveland when a barrel in which aerial bombs were being set off in a fireworks display exploded. A piece of metal hoop three inches wide hit the man as he stood 30 feet away.

Dr. Frederick S. Swantee, 60, of St. Louis, died in a Springfield hospital from injuries suffered when his car skidded on wet street car tracks and crashed into a telephone pole. At Wauseon, Henry Peck, 20, of Kalamazoo, Mich., died when his motorcycle collided with an automobile.

The third traffic victim was Daniel Kalemich, 35, of Weirton, W. Va., who was fatally injured in an automobile crash near East Liverpool, O.

An unidentified negro was killed and William True, 43, of Frankfort, Ky., a resident of the Dayton Soldiers' Home, was seriously hurt when an automobile driven by True struck a telephone pole a mile north of Ellerton, near Dayton.

The traffic fatality toll may be raised, Rev. P. A. Bright, 60, pastor of the Junction City and Moxahala Methodist churches, was believed dying in a Zanesville hospital from injuries he suffered when his automobile was struck by a New York Central freight train at a Moxahala crossing.

CONVICTS KILLED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Two negroes who attempted to escape from Lorton, Va., reformatory are dead today. The men, James Gray, 25, and Edward Thornton, 29, both of Washington were serving long terms from the District of Columbia on charges of robbery.

They were shot by Guard L. G. Brown, when they attempted to rush him in the dormitory.

MAN ADMITS WIFE DEATH

Illinois School Teacher Confesses, Clears Up Two Weeks' Mystery.

MARSHALL, Ill., Aug. 29.—To thwart any attempt at mob violence extra guards today maintained close vigil over the Clarke Co. jail where Hubert C. Moor, high school teacher, confessed he killed his wife, Marjorie.

While a threatening crowd of farmers and townsmen milled about outside the jail, the conscience-stricken young teacher nervously paced his cell, reciting a strange story of jealousy and disgust over dirty dishes which led him to commit the crime.

"Every night," he said, "I would return to find the house dirty and the sink full of unwashed dishes. There was no quarrel. I simply decided that the only way out was to kill her."

In his confession, delivered to State's Attorney Victor Miller, the 30-year-old teacher said:

"Let them kill me in the electric chair. I want to die."

The confession, authorities announced, cleared up the mystery which arose two weeks ago when the bullet-riddled body of Moor's wife was found in the family automobile on a lonely roadside near here.

FUNERAL HELD

David Dressman, Westerville, Rev. L. W. Roberts, O. P. Columbus; Rev. P. A. Schneider, Columbus; Rev. P. F. Ruane and Rev. A. A. Cuth, New Lexington; Rev. J. T. Banahan, Wellston; Rev. Stephen J. Pekalla, Lore City; Rev. Michael J. Sullivan, Barnesville; Rev. James J. Conroy, Sharonville; Rev. M. J. Donovan, Bremen; Rev. James H. Cotter, Ironton; Rev. Ambrose Smith, Columbus; Rev. William Robben, Corning; Rev. Timothy C. Bailey, Cincinnati; Rev. J. W. Byrne, Newark; Rev. Louis V. Preston, McCollinsville; Rev. John Slattery, Newark and Rt. Rev. Monsignor P. J. Hynes, Cincinnati.

CHIMES PLAYED

As an expression of the esteem in which Monsignor Hannan was held in the city which has been the scene of his labors for so long, four hymns were played on the Foreman chimes preceding the time of the funeral.

Fall bearers, chosen from St. Joseph's congregation, were Leo McKenzie, Robert Smith, Thomas F. Jeffries, Thomas O. Gilliland, Frank A. Lynch and John M. Kirwin. Honorary pall bearers, members of the Knights of Columbus, of Chillicothe, of which council, Monsignor Hannan was a member, were Sam McNally, Rooney Gerber, Tom Collopy, P. J. Kennedy, Joseph Hellsmuth and John J. Ryan.

The body was taken to the church at 2 p. m. Sunday where friends and acquaintances viewed it up to the time of the funeral mass.

GUARD OF HONOR

A guard of honor composed of young men members of the congregation remained with the body during this time. Rev. Fr. John J. Murphy, coadjutor of the Columbus diocese and Fr. Joseph Sullivan, assistant pastor of St. Joseph's church met the remains at the door of the church and preceded the coffin to the chancel rail. Following the recitation of the prescribed prayers the members of the congregation responded to the rosary.

The body of Monsignor Hannan was clad in his priestly vestments, the chasuble or outer garment of purple, signifying his investiture as Monsignor. His berretta or cap of black and purple was placed on his coffin.

DRAPED IN MOURNING

As is the custom when a pastor of a church passes away, the facade of St. Joseph's church is draped in mourning which will remain for 30 days as is prescribed.

Following the services at the church the remains were taken to Steubenville by the Albaugh Co. where they were interred in the family lot in St. Joseph's cemetery there.

The entire service was as unostentatious as it was possible to make it and conform to the prescribed ritual for the burial of a priest of the rank of Monsignor. This was the wish of Monsignor Hannan.

Time was when it was a real burden to equip John and Mary and Susie for school. But these days are no more and parents heave a sigh of relief when they contemplate such values that are offered today.

There are suits for active boys and the low price carries with it no reduction in the sturdy quality parents know is essential to long wear. There are smart frocks for girls from six to high school age—perky cottons and attractive woollens. All styles for the young miss in just the way she admires. At the low prices Fall 1932 brings there is no reason why every school girl should not have an interesting variety in her wardrobe.

Shoes—that bugbear of all mothers and dads becomes an easy problem now that prices have come down. New shoes can be depended upon to wear as well as they did at the higher prices and because prices have been so greatly reduced they may be replaced with scarcely a dent in the budget.

Low prices, too, prevail on lingerie for girls and well made underwear for boys. Ties, stockings, socks, handkerchiefs, and hats all may be had at prices far below usual.

School System Is Aided By Cigarette Taxation

COLUMBUS, Aug. 29.—How enactment of the temporary cigarette tax law has enabled the state to contribute funds necessary to maintain the public school system is indicated in a report of Howard L. Bevis, state finance director, to Governor George White. Summarizing disbursements of money to weak school districts, which have been confronted by greater financial needs than ever before because of present economic conditions, Bevis points out that the state has been able to meet all scheduled payments to the schools.

The law provides that the money yielded by the cigarette tax shall be devoted to "the purpose of affording the advantages of free education to all the youth of the state."

In administering it, officials have found that owing to the low cost of cigarettes in conformity with the trend to lower prices on all merchandise, smokers have not looked upon the tax as a burden. Contributing their pennies, they have received in return the satisfaction of knowing that they have made it possible to keep open schools which otherwise would have had no operating funds.

REPORT QUOTED

Bevis' report says: "The total appropriation made by the last assembly for state aid to weak school districts for the year 1932 was $4,825,000. Whereas all other departments and institutions of the state government were cut 15 per cent at the beginning of the year, state aid was cut only 7 per cent in common with the other educational activities. State aid, however, is required to take the additional cut of 5 per cent made in July in order to keep the total of state expenditures within state revenues."

"At the beginning of the year when the 7 per cent cut only was in prospect, the department of education presented to the director of finance a schedule of monthly payments to be made through the year. That schedule follows: January, $700,000; February, $800,000; March, $400,000;

April, $500,000; May, $400,000; June, $200,000; July, $100,000; August, $100,000; September, $150,000; October, $300,000; November, $500,000; December, $584,250.78. This made a total of $4,434,250.78.

"This schedule has been substantially complied with throughout the current year. With the further payment of $254,901.09 in addition to what has already been paid the schedule will be complete up to September 1.

RECEIPTS USED

"Total receipts from the cigarette tax, all of which are devoted by law to state aid for weak school districts, up to and including August 11, were $4,614,898.45. Total expenditures from the state treasury for state aid during the same period of 1931 total payments from the state treasury for school aid were $2,693,331.75."

Insisting upon adequate provision for the schools, Governor White thus expressed the administration attitude:

"The sound education of our youth must be assured at any cost through the proper maintenance of an efficient education system, the most essential proportion of which consists of teachers. Good teachers, decently compensated, are indispensable. Much in the way of equipment and collateral endeavor may, for the time being, safely be dispensed with but a proper teaching force is more needed now than ever before."

DYNAMITE SWIMMING HOLE

SIDDEPORT, Me.—There was no "old swimmin' hole" at Oakridge near here, so six boys decided to make one in the woods. They took 200 pounds of dynamite and three boxes of caps from the hiding place of State highway men for use in rebuilding a street, and blew a hole 20-feet square in the woods.

Is this new stagger system in industry legal under prohibition?

"BRING 'EM BACK ALIVE" THRILLING

Frank Buck's "Bring 'Em Back Alive," the current film at the Cliftona Theater is a unique and unusual treat for the movie-goer looking for gripping and exciting scenes.

Every inch of the film photographed in the Malayan Islands, Mr. Buck's presentation shows up in its true form and gives the public a chance to see that all life is not "just a bowl of cherries" in this great forest, especially when a pison and Tiger meet.

Through his ingenious and unlimited knowledge of jungle-land, Frank Buck is able to capture and bring back alive animals which had heretofore been thought impossible.

The combats of the alligator and Python and the Tiger and Python are scenes that are as tense and gripping as a Greco-Roman wrestling match. In the latter fight, the Tiger, always looking for trouble, discovers that he has met his match and after narrowly escaping being crushed to death, is glad to saunter on his way, only to meet a great black leopard which again causes trouble and excitement and screams from the audience.

Mr. Buck also captures a baby elephant which is so small that two men can carry it. Among other captures include a lizard, the pison, a honey bear, the black leopard, the Tiger, a spotted leopard and many others. Each of the unique and clever traps laid for the captures were made by Mr. Buck and natives in the jungle.

This picture gives an educational and geographical picture of jungle-land, just as it is, and school children, especially, should see it.

The Democratic plan to raise campaign funds by selling soap was probably suggested by Tammany's dirty linen.

Keep Politics Out

LOUISIANA has borrowed a little more than a million dollars from the reconstruction finance corporation for the relief of her treasury as well as of her unemployed. She was the fourth state to receive a grant from the R. F. C., Illinois, Ohio and Michigan having been there before her. Louisiana's plea was that her funds had been depleted by floods and drought damage and by extensive highway and public works programs and that she is now without adequate resources of her own.

The money granted will be used in work of relief in the parishes where there is an extreme need. An unemployed relief committee created by gubernatorial proclamation last month will administer the fund.

This is only the beginning. Other states are on the way to Washington with petitions for their share of this windfall. There is little question of their need for the money nor is there any doubt about the intention of the politicians in some states to play politics with the money if they can fool the R. F. C.

Too much caution and supervision cannot be exercised by the R. F. C. when it places large sums of money in the hands of state administrations known to be extravagant and wasteful. Given a free hand the politicians will use it for political relief instead of unemployment relief, for political coffers are as empty as the pockets of the jobless.

Women Wage Earners

THERE are still some vocations which remain exclusively men's jobs. For example, there are only eight women blacksmiths and 10 longshorewomen in the United States. Though there are 87 women hunters, trappers and guides, one woman plumber and one telephone linewoman, no woman has yet become a professional fighter, soldier, sailor or marine, structural ironworker, trainman, iron puddler, boilermaker or roofer.

However, the best proof of women's success as wage-earners will not be found in the variety of their occupations but in their ability to hold their jobs in the face of the extreme competition of the present.

There are 10,000,000 women gainfully employed in the United States at a time when that many or more men are jobless. And men will not crowd them out of their jobs. Much of the work women do male fingers are not fitted for and the average wage for women workers is below the living wage for men.

Before the industrialization of women and before offices, stores and beauty parlors absorbed the remaining female jobholders, panics and periods of male unemployment found the family without a breadwinner. The current economic fainting spell has been different in that the women of the household have in hundreds of thousands of cases become the breadwinners. Fathers and husbands and brothers thrown out of work have been fortunate in having income-producing womenfolk.

Indiana Takes Lead

HOOSIER taxpayers should be the envy of the nation today, for the Indiana legislature has virtually cut property taxes in half. This was accomplished by the simple expedient of limiting the total tax levy on real estate to $1.50 on each $100. The prevailing levy averages $2.82.

Nor did the lawmakers create new taxes to fill the gap. A $5,000,000 deficit looming in the next fiscal year it left for the executive branch of the government to meet either by loans or by retrenchment and economy.

This is one way of effecting government economies. The legislature has made the executive branch answerable to the people, who right now are clamoring for reduced public expenditures and have no taste for putting off the inevitable by borrowing against the future for the extravagances of the present.

Reduction of property taxes will tend to produce more revenue from this source for burdensome taxation has virtually paralyzed the real estate market. Lower taxes will boost real estate values which in turn will produce more revenue for public purposes.

Before this depression folds its gloomy tents and quietly steals away all states must follow this Hoosier example. Taxes must come down before the business barometer goes up. The government can no more go on living beyond its means than business or the individual can and both busi-

"MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY"

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY COWLEY-FRIEDLE INC., DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

At 11:30 on New Year's Eve, Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt arrives at the exclusive Mayfair Club in response to a mysterious summons from District Attorney Merle Dougherty. The latter informs Colt he believes Lola Carewe, known as "The Night-Club Lady," widow of Gaylord Gifford, the cotton millionaire is the "higher-up" responsible for numerous jewel robberies perpetrated recently which baffle the police. Though her husband died practically penniless, Lola lives in luxury. She arrives at the Mayfair accompanied by Vincent Rowland, an attorney. At Lola's urgent request, Colt joins her party. She voices the fear that she will not leave Mayfair alive, adding that her dog and parrot were mysteriously killed. And, tonight, she received a note threatening death before three a. m. Accompanied by detectives and one woman operative, Colt goes with Lola to her apartment.

CHAPTER FIVE

IN silence we rode up the elevator shaft to the pent-house which Lola Carewe called her home,—an aerie perched high in the New York skyline like the nest of some predatory bird. On the twenty-second floor, our way led down a long, heavily carpeted corridor, mysterious in its dim light, to the foot of an iron stairs leading up to the pent-house door. Still without talk, we began the ascent of those steps. Four times the iron staircase turned in its climb to Lola's dwelling place. At each landing, I noticed that Thatcher Colt held back the party while he turned first, Dougherty, puffing and blowing, kept pace bravely with him; Lola followed, with Vincent Rowland, Harris, and myself bringing up the rear.

At the top of the stairs, we found the detail from Headquarters. In charge of the party was Lieutenant Fallon, of Colt's personal staff, with Detectives Langley and Schwartz, and a group of lesser known men, with one of our girl operatives, Dorothy Lox, an ample housewife of brunette, later famous for her help to Colt in the Chinatown Seven Murders case.

As Fallon saluted, he reported: "I got the building plans from the office downstairs; they think it's a burglar scare. We can guard every window and door of the pent-house, except the ones that open on a sheer drop to the street, with plenty of men for the terrace and roof—and you can use Miss Lox inside."

"Let me see the lay-out."

The chief studied the paper—a printed diagram showing the floor plans of the pent-house.

"Very good," he said, after a moment. "Let's go!"

Waving aside the key Lola offered him, Colt rang the apartment bell. Fallon saluted and nodded toward the other detectives, who scattered toward the places assigned to them. All approaches to the pent-house were now under heavy police guard.

The door was opened by a short and rather stout Chinaman, with a completely bald head, and a face inexpressibly homely. The yellow man was wearing a house-robe of green silk, loose-flowing, girdled with a rope sash and ornamented with a pattern of dragons wrought in golden thread. Rich apparel for a man-servant! He was a bizarre apparition, our first encounter with Lola Carewe's singular household. I wondered if Colt would not compare him with a pensive sea-elephant in repose. Standing with his yellow hands folded at his thighs, and his large head slightly swaying from side to side, the Oriental butler said, evenly and distinctly: "A happy new year to you, madame, after the custom of the forty-eight states of this independent country."

"Thanks, Chung!"

The mistress of the pent-house seemed to accept her butler's orotund salutation as merely a casual greeting. I wondered if he pattered around these rooms all day long making heroic speeches like that. Or whether he was just another player in a show that Lola Carewe was staging—for what possible purpose?

We were in a small reception hall and the front door of the apartment had clanged shut, closing us in. The air was stiflingly warm.

Later we were to find the whole apartment overheated. Chung took our wraps and waddled to a closet. We were about to follow our hostess down the broad corridor, when the Commissioner said:

"Miss Carewe, you are not to be in any room alone at any time. When I cannot be with you, Miss Lox here must attend you."

With a martyr's smile, Lola agreed.

"Anything else?" she inquired. "I shall wish to make a tour of your apartment, terrace, and roof. I want to see every room. Then I should like to meet all the members of your household."

Before Lola could reply, a young woman in maid's costume hastened down the corridor.

"Mother awake, Eunice?" asked Lola quickly.

"She retired to her room hours ago. The door is closed."

"And Christine?"

"Still out on her New Year party, madame."

"Awaken my mother, at once. Tell her not to worry, but the police are here. They may want to talk with her. Now, Mr. Colt—as the maid darted off—"we shall begin your tour of my little home. The door leads out to the terrace."

The apartment formed an immense rectangle, two sides of which opened on the flag-stoned terrace, now deep in slush. Borrowing a pocket torch from one of the detectives, Thatcher Colt led the way out into the raw and gusty night. The exploring circle of his flashlight lamp came to rest on the icy rungs of a perpendicular ladder fixed into the bricks of the nearest wall. Still in top hat and evening coat, the Commissioner quickly mounted the slippery ascent and reached the roof. Bent forward against the wind he personally examined every square foot of the roof. Descending again, he traversed all the area of the terrace. But he found nothing. Indeed he could feel secure for there was not the slightest evidence in the slush of one human footprint. The area above and around the pent-house was empty in the clasp of the storm.

Shivering and wet, we returned inside, leaving a man on the sleety roof and two on the storm-swept terrace. Lola was at the door and led us down the corridor and into the living-room.

We found the living-room a place of chaste elegance and angular splendor. The walls and fireplace made a discreet background for the furniture which, so Vincent Rowland revealed, had been specially designed by Lola herself. The four walls of that large chamber were covered with a heavy linen of natural hue, a light ecru color, the dull uneven weave of which seemed to smother the lamp-light in a warm embrace. Nun's veiling draped the windows, a little deeper than the color of the walls, and matching the upholstery of the chairs and couch. The velvet carpet of raisin brown was also without a sheen, so that the coverings of the furniture, walls, and floor all held and subdued the illumination. There was an esthetic honesty everywhere apparent, in the square lines of unfinished wood, waxed to give a mellow appearance of age. A real fire burned on the brick floor of the fireplace.

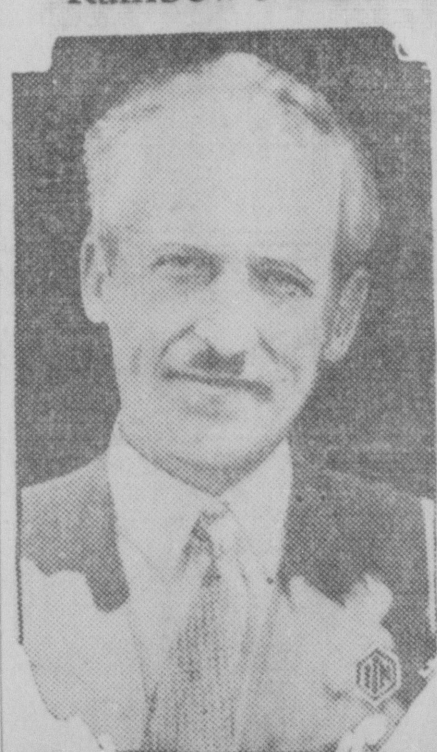

Standing by the fireplace to warm himself, Colt was about to light a cigarette, but suddenly he dropped the still lighted match into the fire. Then from the mantel the Commissioner lifted a crumpled white object in his hand.

The Double Death Warrant!

Carelessness in Handling Fire and Hot Liquids Is Cause of Most Burns

These Accidents Are Taking an Ever-Increasing Toll, Says Dr. Copeland, Urging a Knowledge of First-Aid Treatment and the Necessity of Teaching Children to Avoid This Danger.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WE never look at a newspaper without reading of some unfortunate person who has suffered a burn or scald. This sort of news is particularly disheartening because usually the accident involves a child.

A recent survey of hospital records indicates there is a steady increase in the number of burn accidents. Many of these cases required hospital care for a period of from three to four months. Other patients were fatally injured and many received serious and disabling scars.

Most of the accidents resulted from carelessness in the handling of fire and hot liquids, such as water, coffee, soup, milk and gravy. Careless handling of these liquids causes severe scalding which may prove to be serious.

Scalding is similar to the effects of a burn received from fire. It produces a reddening of the skin with severe pain. The underlying structures may be destroyed and result in the formation of deep scars.

Everyone should be familiar with what to do in the immediate treatment of a burn, but it is always advisable to consult the physician. When it is a simple burn, apply moistened starch, flour or baking powder. This protects the part and keeps the air away from the inflamed area. In a severe burn, with marked reddening of the skin, apply olive oil, castor oil, vaseline or some other ointment.

In the more severe form, where the pain is intense, place the afflicted individual in a warm tub, to which a pound of baking soda has been added. Call the doctor immediately and until he arrives keep the suffering person in this warm tub. Warm fluids such as tea and milk may be given to maintain body heat.

If the burn has been caused by fire, do not try to remove the clothing. Extinguish the fire by wrapping up in a blanket. Never run, because running will stir the flames and cause them to burn more. If a blanket is not within reach, lie down and roll over slowly. As you roll, beat out the flames with your hands. Try not to become excited.

Severe cases of burn are best handled in a hospital. At the hospital a patient receives the much needed attention and most approved treatment.

A form of treatment which was successfully used during the World War is now known as the "tannic acid treatment." It controls the pain and prevents scar formation. When properly administered this method hastens convalescence and prevents complications.

Children should never be permitted near fires or stoves. Hot liquids, such as soups and boiling water, should be kept far beyond the reach of the small child. Playing with matches and hot water should never be tolerated. These accidents can be prevented and your children spared great agony and disfigurement if they are taught the danger of fire and hot fluids.

bring a dreamy, far-off state of mind that will make people feel as if they were under a spell, yet there should be an urge to do things, and if one guards against impulse, is firm and determined much of the confusion that is likely to take place, may be held in subjection.

This is a favorable day for writers, composers, and musicians, who will instill much that is both enchanting and entrancing into the minds of their readers and listeners. To the average person there will be a desire to be luxurious, to gratify the tastes, and be attracted to strange scenes and people.

Because of a certain amount of confusion and instability which is likely to be experienced today, vague and uncertain affairs should be avoided or looked into very closely before assuming responsibility or liability. Be on the lookout for fictitious representations and control the love for sensation as there is a likelihood of being dominated by stronger minds. The movie theaters will attract with pictures of sensational character, in which the love of luxury, strange scenes and parties will entrap the innocent. Radio programs may exhibit little of the tuneful melodies of the classics.

Some very sensational exposures, mysteries, and charges of treachery will appear on the headlines of today's papers. Affairs connected with reformatories and prisons will likely experience some difficulty in keeping under suppression some undesirable news, the seers foretell.

Doctors in hospitals should give special attention to prescribing and to administering anaesthetics. Patients will have a trying time.

Under this rule of the stars, during the coming month, the radio programs may devote much time to domestic science; the public will be less inclined to jazz music and will turn to the classics.

Children born on this day may experience undefinable longings and are likely to be attracted to strange places and people, thus they should be carefully trained to distinguish the realities from the glamour of life.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, author and physician was born on this date, 1809. Others who have celebrated it as a birthday, include John Locke, 1632, famous philosopher; Maurice Maeterlinck, 1862, Belgian author.

Before the industrialization of women and before offices, stores and beauty parlors absorbed the remaining male jobholders, men and periods of male unemployment found the family without a breadwinner. The current economic fainting spell has been different in that the women of the household have in hundreds of thousands of cases become the breadwinners. Fathers and husbands and brothers thrown out of work have been fortunate in having income-producing womenfolk.

Indiana Takes Lead

HOOSIER taxpayers should be envious of the nation today for the Indiana legislature has virtually cut property taxes in half. This was accomplished by the simple expedient of limiting the total tax levy on real estate to $1.50 on each $100. The prevailing levy averages $2.82.

Nor did the lawmakers create new taxes to fill the gap. A $5,000,000 deficit loomed in the next fiscal year it left for the executive branch of the government to meet either by loans or by retrenchment and economy.

This is one way of effecting government economies. The legislature has made the executive branch answerable to the people who right now are clamoring for reduced public expenditures and have no taste for putting off the inevitable by borrowing against the future for the extravagances of the present.

Reduction of property taxes will tend to produce more revenue from this source for parsimonious taxation has virtually paralyzed the real estate market. Lower taxes will boost real estate values which in turn will produce more revenue for public purposes.

Before this depression folds its gloomy tent and quietly steals away all states must follow this Hoosier example. Taxes must come down before the business barometer can go on having normalcy and more go on having normalcy and more go on having normalcy.

"MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY"

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY COWLEY-FRIEDLE INC., DISTRIBUTED BY KINO FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

At 11:30 on New Year's Eve, Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt arrives at the exclusive Mayfair Club in response to a mysterious summons from District Attorney Merle Dougherty. The latter informs Colt he believes Lola Carewe, known as "The Night-Club Lady", widow of Gaylor Gifford, the cotton millionaire is the "higher-up" responsible for numerous jewel robberies perpetrated recently which baffle the police. Though her husband died practically penniless, Lola lives in luxury. She arrives at the Mayfair accompanied by Vincent Rowland, an attorney. At Lola's urgent request, Colt joins her party. She voices the fear that she will not leave Mayfair alive, adding that her dog and parrot were mysteriously killed. And, tonight, she received a note threatening death before three a. m. Accompanied by detectives and one woman operative, Colt goes with Lola to her apartment.

CHAPTER FIVE

IN silence we rode up the elevator shaft to the pent-house which Lola Carewe called her home—an aerial perched high in the New York skyline like the nest of some predatory bird. On the twenty-second floor, our way led down a long, heavily carpeted corridor, mysterious in its dim light, to the foot of an iron staircase leading up to the pent-house door. Still without talk, we began the ascent of those steps. Four times the iron staircase turned in its climb to Lola's dwelling place. At each landing, I noticed that Thatcher Colt held back the party while he turned first. Dougherty, puffing and blowing, kept pace bravely with him; Lola followed, with Vincent Rowland, Harris, and myself bringing up the rear.

At the top of the stairs, we found in detail from Headquarters. In charge of the party was Lieutenant Fallon, of Colt's personal staff, with Detectives Langley and Schwartz, and a group of lesser known men, with one of our girl operatives, Dorothy Lox, an ample housewife, later famous for her help to Colt in the Chinatown Seven Murders case.

As Fallon saluted, he reported: "I got the building plans from the office downstairs, they think it's a burglar scare. We can guard every window and door of the pent-house, except the ones that open on a sheer drop to the street, with plenty of men for the terrace and roof—and you can use Miss Lox inside."

"Let me see the lay-out," the chief studied the paper—a printed diagram showing the floor plans of the pent-house.

"Very good," he said, after a moment. "Let's go!"

Waving aside the key Lola offered him, Colt rang the apartment bell. Fallon saluted and nodded toward the other detectives, who scattered toward the places assigned to them. All approaches to the pent-house were now under heavy police guard.

The door was opened by a short and rather stout Chinaman, with a completely bald head, and a face inexpressibly homely. The yellow man was wearing a house-robe of green silk, loose-flowing, griddled with a rope sash and ornamented with a pattern of dragons wrought in golden thread. Rich apparel for a man-servant! He was a bizarre apparition, our first encounter with Lola Carewe's singular household. I wondered if Colt would not compare him with a pensive sea-elephant in repose. Standing with his yellow hands folded at his thighs, and his large head slightly swaying from side to side, the Oriental butler said, evenly and distinctly:

"A happy new year to you, madame, after the custom of the forty-eight states of this independent country."

"Thanks, Chung!"

The mistress of the pent-house seemed to accept her butler's ornate salutation as merely a casual greeting. I wondered if he pattered around these rooms all day long making heroic speeches like that. Or whether he was just another player in a show that Lola Carewe was staging—for what possible purpose?

We were in a small reception hall, and the front door of the apartment had clanged shut, closing us in. The air was stiflingly warm. Later we were to find the whole apartment overheated. Chung took our wraps and waddled to a closet. We were about to follow our hostess down the broad corridor, when the Commissioner said:

"Miss Carewe, you are not to be in any room alone at any time. When I cannot be with you, Miss Lox here must attend you."

With a martyr's smile, Lola agreed.

"Anything else?" she inquired. "I shall wish to make a tour of your apartment, terrace, and roof. I want to see every room. Then I should like to meet all the members of your household."

Before Lola could reply, a young woman in maid's costume hastened down the corridor.

"Mother awake, Eunice?" asked Lola quickly.

"She retired to her room hours ago. The door is closed."

"And Christine?"

"Still out on her New Year party, madame."

"Awaken my mother, at once. Tell her not to worry, but the police are here. They may want to talk with her. Now, Mr. Colt—as the maid darted off—"we shall begin our tour of my little home. This door leads out to the terrace."

The apartment formed an immense rectangle, two sides of which opened on the flag-strewn terrace, now deep in slush. Borrowing a pocket torch from one of the detectives, Thatcher Colt led the way out into the raw and gusty night.

The exploring circle of his flashlight

lamp came to rest on the icy rungs of a perpendicular ladder fixed into the bricks of the nearest wall. Still in top hat and evening coat, the Commissioner quickly mounted the roof. Bent forward against the wind he personally examined every square foot of the roof. Descending again he traversed all the area of the terrace. But he found nothing. Indeed he could feel secure for there was not the slightest evidence in the slush of one human footfall. The area above and around the pent-house was empty in the clasp of the storm.

Shivering and wet, we returned inside leaving a man on the sleety roof and two on the storm-swept terrace. Lola was at the door and led us down the corridor and into the living-room.

We found the living-room a place of chaste elegance and angular splendor. The walls and fireplace made a discreet background for the furniture which, so Vincent Rowland revealed, had been specially designed by Lola herself. The four walls of that large chamber were covered with a heavy linen of natural hue, a light ecru color the dull uneven weave of which seemed to smother the lamp-light in a warm embrace. Nun's veiling draped the windows a little deeper than the color of the walls, and matching the upholstery of the chairs and couch. The velvet carpet of raisin brown was also without a sheen, so that the coverings of the furniture, walls, and floor all held and subdued the illumination. There was an esthetic honesty everywhere apparent in the square lines of unfinished wood, waved to give a mild appearance of age. A real fire burned on the brick floor of the fireplace.

Standing by the fireplace to warm himself, Colt was about to light a cigarette. Suddenly he drew the still lighted match into the fire. From the mantel the Commissioner lifted a crumpled white object in his hand.

The Double Death Warrant!

Carelessness in Handling Fire and Hot Liquids Is Cause of Most Burns

These Accidents Are Taking an Ever-Increasing Toll, Says Dr. Copeland, Urging a Knowledge of First-Aid Treatment and the Necessity of Teaching Children to Avoid This Danger.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WE never look, at a newspaper without reading of some unfortunate person who has suffered a burn or scald. This sort of news is particularly disheartening because usually the accident involves a child.

A recent survey of hospital records indicates there is a steady increase in the number of burn accidents. Many of these cases required hospital care for a period of from three to four months. Other patients were fatally injured and many received serious and disabling scars.

Most of the accidents resulted from carelessness in the handling of fire and hot liquids, such as water, coffee, soup, milk and gravy. Careless handling of these liquids causes severe scalding which may prove to be serious.

Scalding is similar to the effects of a burn, but it is always advisable to consult the physician. When it is a simple burn, apply moistened starch flour or baking powder. This protects the part and keeps the air away from the inflamed area. In a severe burn with marked reddening of the skin, apply olive oil, castor oil, vaseline or some other ointment.

In the more severe form, where the pain is intense, place the affected individual in a warm tub, to which a pound of baking soda has been added. Call the doctor immediately and until he arrives keep the suffering person in this warm tub. Warm fluids such as tea and milk may be given to maintain body heat.

If the burn has been caused by fire, do not try to remove the clothing. Extinguish the fire by wrapping up in a blanket. Never run because running will stir the flames and cause them to burn more.

If a blanket is not within reach, lie down and roll over slowly. As you roll, beat out the flames with your hands. Try not to become excited. Severe cases of burn are best handled in a hospital. At the hospital a patient receives the much needed attention and most approved treatment.

A form of treatment which was successfully used during the World War is now known as the "tannic acid treatment." It controls the pain and prevents scar formation. When properly administered this method hastens convalescence and prevents complications.

Children should never be permitted near fires or stoves. Hot liquids, such as soups and boiling water, should be kept far beyond the reach of the small child. Playing with matches and hot water should never be tolerated. These accidents can be prevented and your children spared great agony and disfigurement if they are taught the danger of fire and hot fluids.

REPORT QUOTED
Bevis' report says:

"The total appropriation made by the last assembly for state aid to weak school districts for the year 1932 was $4,825,000. Whereas all other departments and institutions of the state government were cut 15 per cent at the beginning of the year, state aid was cut only 7 per cent in common with the other educational activities. State aid, however, is required to take the additional cut of 5 per cent made in July in order to keep the total of state expenditures within state revenues.

"At the beginning of the year when the 7 per cent cut only was in prospect, the department of education presented to the director of finance a schedule of monthly payments to be made through the year. That schedule follows: January, $700,000; February, $800,000; March, $400,000;

April, $500,000; May $400,000; June $200,000; July, $100,000; August, $100,000; September, $150,000; October, $300,000; November, $500,000; December, $584,250.78. This made a total of $4,434,250.78.

"This schedule has been substantially complied with throughout the current year. With the further payment of $254,901.09 in addition to what has already been paid the schedule will be complete up to September 1.

RECEIPTS USED
"Total receipts from the cigarette tax, all of which are devoted by law to state aid for weak school districts, up to and including August 11, were $4,044,395.45. Total expenditures from the state treasury for state aid during the period the cigarette tax has been in effect have been $4,765,452.94.

"Total payments from the state treasury for state aid during 1932, up to and including August 11, were $3,110,142.44. During the same period of 1931 total payments from the state treasury for school aid were $2,693,331.75.

Insisting upon adequate provision for the schools, Governor White thus expressed the administration attitude:

"The sound education of our youth must be assured at any cost through the proper maintenance of an efficient education system, the most essential proportion of which consists of teachers. Good teachers, decently compensated, are indispensable. Much in the way of equipment and collateral endeavor may, for the time being, safely be dispensed with but a proper teaching force is more needed now than ever before."

School System Is Aided By Cigarette Taxation

COLUMBUS, Aug. 29.—How enactment of the temporary cigarette tax law has enabled the state to contribute funds necessary to maintain the public school system is indicated in a report of Howard L. Bevis, state finance director, to Governor George White. Summarizing disbursements of money to weak school districts, which have been confronted by greater financial needs than ever before because of present economic conditions, Bevis points out that the state has been able to meet all scheduled payments to the schools.

The law provides that the money yielded by the cigarette tax shall be devoted to "the purpose of affording the advantages of free education to all the youth of the state."

In administering it, officials have found that owing to the low cost of cigarettes in conformity with the trend to lower prices on all merchandise, smokers have not looked upon the tax as a burden.

Contributing their pennies, they have received in return the satisfaction of knowing that they have made it possible to keep open schools which otherwise would have had no operating funds.

American Designers Lead with New Fashions

Home Creations Well Ahead of Paris with Latest Styles for Late Fall and Early Winter. Color and Fabric Stressed.

Milady is going to be very enthusiastic over the new clothes for the coming season. American designers have excelled their foreign competitors, and even themselves, in turning out a lovely line of creations in all models—street, sports and formal—so entrancing that milady will not be able to resist them. Wool leads in the choice of fabrics for street and sports wear and velvet for formal evening. Above are three models chosen by Hollywood notables. At left is Myrna Loy in a smart outfit of Chartruse wool. It is novel in its vari-colored woven fabric waist band and collar. The smart little hat is of the same material. In center, Jean Harlow wears a gorgeous velvet evening gown. It has a creamy lace bodice and is trimmed with wide bands of silver fox fur. At right is a tweed and pique combination, worn by Madge Evans. The dress shows a short-sleeved tie-around top with pique fashioning the cuffs and vestee, which is finished with a cat-whisker bow. The most fashionable colors this season are all shades of red of rosy tones from light to deep wine shades.

American Designers Lead with New Fashions

Home Creations Well Ahead of Paris with Latest Styles for Late Fall and Early Winter. Color and Fabric Stressed.

Milady is going to be very enthusiastic over the new clothes for the coming season. American designers have excelled their foreign competitors, and even themselves, in turning out a lovely line of creations in all models—street, sports and formal—so entrancing that milady will not be able to resist them. Wool leads in the choice of fabrics for street and sports wear and velvet for formal evening. Above are three models chosen by Hollywood notables. At left is Myrna Loy in a smart outfit of Chartreuse wool. It is novel in its vari-colored woven fabric waist band and collar. The smart little hat is of the same material. In center, Jean Harlow wears a gorgeous velvet evening gown. It has a creamy lace bodice and is trimmed with wide bands of silver fox fur. At right is a tweed and pique combination, worn by Madge Evans. The dress shows a short-sleeved tie-around top with pique fashioning the cuffs and vestee, which is finished with a cat-whisker bow. The most fashionable colors this season are all shades of red of rosy tones from light to deep wine shades.

Good—they've got to be Good!

THROWS OUT IMPERFECT CIGARETTES
Uncanny Device Spots Flaws in Manufacture

Twenty electric fingers search every pack of Chesterfields before it's sealed up. Every Chesterfield is checked to make sure that it is made right; that is, the right size and properly filled. And that's why Chesterfields are firm, round, filled full—to smoke cool and last longer. And they're made of mild, ripe tobacco—cross-blended! . . . They're not to be milder and tastier.
